

A story for founders

Founder Fog

A year in the founder's chair, and how to see through the fog

adam.ahmedhaz.com/fog

Founder Fog

ضباب المؤسس

A story about Salma, Tariq and Hisham, and the first year of a company.

Written for people starting a company, and for anyone thinking about it.

Pictures: needle-felted art made for this book. Fonts: Manrope and Readex Pro (SIL Open Font Licence).

Ideas and sources follow the Founder Playbook in the game. Not financial or legal advice.

© 2026 adam.ahmedhaz.com

Before you start

Every founder works in a fog. You cannot see the market clearly, the numbers arrive late, and when you are tired the fog gets thicker. This book follows Salma through the first year of a company that helps small shops get paid on time.

Each scene ends with a box called The fog lifts: one idea, in plain words, with where it comes from. At the end of each chapter there is a page of tools to use in your own company this week.

The story comes from Founder Fog, a free game where you run a startup week by week. Play a chapter, then play the year.

Contents

Chapter 1: The jump	4
---------------------------	---

The jump

Every company starts before it has a name: with a person, a problem that will not let go, and a sum on the back of an envelope.

The fog isn't out there in the market. Most of it is in your own head.

Hisham

In this chapter

Personal runway

Vesting

The Mom Test

Clarity

12 months

$$\begin{array}{|c|} \hline 18,000 \\ \hline \text{savings ($)} \\ \hline \end{array} \div \begin{array}{|c|} \hline 1,500 \\ \hline \text{to live, a month} \\ \hline \end{array} = \begin{array}{|c|} \hline 12 \\ \hline \text{months} \\ \hline \end{array}$$

For six years Salma managed products at a bank in Cairo. Every month she watched small shops wait weeks to get paid, and borrow to cover the gap. Before she handed in her notice, she did one sum. Savings: $18,000. Rent, food and bills: $1,500 a month. That gave her 12 months, if nothing went wrong. Hisham, who had sold his first company, called it her personal runway. “Write it on the wall,” he said. “Not to scare you. So you always know.”

THE FOG LIFTS · PERSONAL RUNWAY

Savings divided by what you need to live each month. It is the clock that starts the day you quit, and founders who know it make calmer decisions.

CHAPTER 1 · 2

Half and half on a napkin

Tariq had built two apps nobody used, and he wanted this one to be different. In a café near Tahrir they drew a line down a paper napkin. Half for Salma, half for Tariq. “Deal?” said Tariq. Hisham put down his coffee. “Imagine it is month 8, and one of you wants to leave. Who keeps the half?” Nobody spoke. That night they agreed on vesting: shares earned over 4 years, and nothing until the end of year one. It felt unromantic. It was the kindest thing they did all year.

THE FOG LIFTS · VESTING

Founder shares are earned over time, usually 4 years with a 1-year cliff. It protects whoever stays, and investors will ask for it anyway.

Brad Feld and Jason Mendelson, Venture Deals

CHAPTER 1 · 3

Don't build yet

Tariq wanted to start coding on Monday. Hisham asked for 20 conversations first, with one rule: never ask if they like the idea. So Salma sat on a stool in Umm Hany's grocery shop and asked about last month instead. How many customers paid later? How long did she wait? What did she do while she waited? Umm Hany pulled out a shoebox of paper receipts. "40 days, sometimes," she said. "I borrow from my brother." Nobody said the word app. Salma filled 6 pages.

THE FOG LIFTS · THE MOM TEST

Ask about what people did, not about your idea. Opinions are polite. What they did last month is data.

Rob Fitzpatrick, The Mom Test (2013)

CHAPTER 1 · 4

The first fog

3 weeks in, Salma was sleeping 5 hours a night. Her notes stopped making sense. She read the same email 4 times and answered the wrong question. Hisham called at midnight and heard it in her voice. “In my first company I thought being tired proved I cared,” he said. “It was just the fog. It hides the numbers first, then the people.” She closed the laptop. The next day she slept 8 hours, walked by the Nile, and found the mistake in her spreadsheet in 10 minutes.

THE FOG LIFTS · CLARITY

The founder is the company's first resource. Sleep, exercise and one evening off a week are how good decisions keep coming.

Michael A. Freeman et al., Are Entrepreneurs Touched with Fire? (2015)

Tools for week 0

1. Personal runway

÷

=

savings

to live, a month

months

2. The co-founder talk: five questions for this month

- ☐ Who decides what, and who breaks a tie?

- ☐ How is the equity split, and does it vest?

- ☐ What happens if one of us leaves?

- ☐ How much does each of us need to live on?

- ☐ How do we disagree without breaking up?

3. Twenty conversations, before any code

One circle per conversation about what someone did last month.

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

The full book

This was chapter 1 of 12. The full year, with every chapter's tools, is in the printed book.

1	The jump	Week 0
2	Looking for fit	Week 2
3	The angel	Week 5
4	The big customer	Week 7
5	Four days without sleep	Week 9
6	The clock	Week 12
7	The rival	Week 14
8	Ramadan	Week 21
9	The first salesperson	Week 26
10	The licence and the family	Week 30
11	The pivot	Week 44
12	A year later	Week 52

76 pages · English and Arabic · 61 felted scenes

Salma has 12 months of savings, a co-founder, a mentor and a problem worth solving. What she does not have is a clear view. A story about the first year of a company, the fog every founder works in, and the ideas that help it lift.

Play the game free

adam.ahmedhaz.com/founder-fog

English and Arabic · No account

